

ALL ABOUT SENIORS

Vets go high-tech

Photo Courtesy: Mark Grossman/Mark Grossman Public Relations

Pictured from left: Philip Coffey of Mt. Sinai, computer installations coordinator, RSVP; Wilkens Young of Bellport, director, Suffolk County United Veterans; and Stan Meyers of Smithtown, program coordinator, RSVP.

At the John J. Lynch Veterans Place Shelter in Yaphank, a new computer lab for formerly homeless veterans recently opened due to the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) of Suffolk. The plan for the computers is to help the Veterans who reside at the shelter to find and secure employment.

“This opens up a whole new world for our veterans at the John J. Lynch Shelter,” said Wilkens Young, Director of Suffolk County United Veterans, which runs the shelter.

Young continued, “They can now enroll in online vocational and educational training programs, search for employment, prepare resumes, and submit job applications. We are grateful to RSVP Suffolk for this very generous and much-needed donation.”

RSVP equipped the computer lab with five computer workstations, a printer and a copier. The lab will be open seven days a week, from 9 a.m.-9 p.m. RSVP will also be providing training to help veterans improve their computer skills.

Newsday
HometownShopper
 Smithtown - May 19, 2016 208 - 11,701 Circulation
 Visit our digital edition at hometownshopperli.com